From the Paris Gazette dated, Nov. 23.

Paris, Nov. 22. The 16th of this Month, Signior Lorenzo Tiepolo Ambaſſador of Venice, made his publick Entry into this City: The Marſhal de Huxelles, and the Sieur de Sainctot Introductor of Ambaſſadors, went to the Monaſtery of Picpus to take him up in the King's Coach, and the Entry was made in this Order.—Firſt came the Introductor's Coach, then the Marſhal de Huxelles, after which walked the Ambaſſador's Footmen; then came his Maſter of the Horſe, and his Pages on Horſeback; then the King's Coach, then thoſe of the Dutcheſs of Burgundy, Madam, the Duke of Orleans, and ſome other of the Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood, afterwards that of the Marqueſs de Torcy, Secretary of State for foreign Affairs; and laſtly the Ambaſſador's 4 Coaches, which were very magnificent, as were alſo his Liveries. Being arriv'd at his Palace, he was complemented on the Part of the King, by the Duke de la Tremouille, Firſt Gentleman of his Majeſty's Bed-Chamber.

The 18th, The Count de Brionne, Maſter of the Horſe of France, and the Sieur de Sainctot, went to the Ambaſſador's Palace, with the King's and Dutcheſs of Burgundy's Coaches, and from thence conducted him to Verſailles, where he had his firſt publick Audience of his Majeſty. In the outer Court of the Palace, the Companies of French and Swiſs-Guards ſtood drawn up in Arms, the Drums beating a March; in the inner Court were the Guards of the Gate, &c. at their uſual Poſts, in Arms likewiſe. And on the Stairs ſtood the hundred Swiſs in their Habits of Ceremony, with their Halbards in their Hands. He was receiv'd in the Guard-Chamber by the Marſhal de Harcourt, Captain of the Guards du Corps, who were drawn up in 2 Lines, thro' which he paſſ'd. After he had Audience of the King, he had Audience likewiſe of the Dauphin, the Duke of Burgundy, &c. To all which Audiences he went in his Gown, as is the Cuſtom of the Ambaſſadors of Venice; and after he had been treated by the Kin's Officers, he was reconducted to Paris, by the Sieur de Sainctot with the ſame Ceremonies he came.
